Eva Pajares, the deputy councilor of the regional government of Andalusia in Campo de Gibraltar, thanked citizens and companies for their contributions, such as those made by Fundación Cepsa, to help in this health crisis: "This is a very difficult situation in which we need to work together and this is what we are seeing: society and companies like Cepsa and its Foundation are showing exemplary behavior by helping in any way they can. I have no doubt that we will stop this virus together and we will achieve it as one." Pajares also highlighted the work of the law enforcement authorities, local police forces, civil protection services, non-governmental organizations, health care workers, public transport operators and professionals in the energy sector, who work every day to help the country overcome the crisis caused by COVID-19.
