- Fundación Moeve announces its third edition, reaffirming its support for innovative solutions that drive the just ecological transition and contribute to improving the quality of life of people and the environment. It does so after receiving a total of 357 entries since the awards were first launched

Fundación Moeve has announced the annual call for entries for the third edition of the Fundación Moeve Awards (formerly known as the Future for All Awards). With this initiative, the entity reinforces and strengthens its benchmark competition, which aims to identify and promote initiatives that foster a more sustainable, balanced, and inclusive economic model for all stakeholders, creating new opportunities and leaving no one behind.

The call for entries for this new edition comes after the notable growth experienced in 2025, a year in which 214 entries were received from across the country, representing an increase of 50% compared to the first year. This reception supports the foundation's ambition to act as a catalyst for a diverse ecosystem of agents, from startups and SMEs to NGOs and public entities, to promote the development of tangible solutions where social development and environmental protection coexist. As something new this year, the Awards are expanding their scope of action to Portugal. This means that entities based and operating both in Spain and in its neighboring country will be able to submit their applications, reinforcing the Iberian nature of the ecological transition.

Since their inception, these Awards have served as a promotional platform for entities working at the intersection of technology, conservation, and inclusion. The evolution of these Awards, named after the entity, responds to the foundation's ambition to consolidate innovation and sustainability as the cross-cutting axis of its social action.

Teresa Mañueco, Director of the Foundation, said: "The true value of emerging and innovative projects lies in their capacity to foster a just ecological transition, generating a real social and environmental impact. With this third edition of the awards, we are reinforcing a collaborative model that drives solid solutions for the challenges of the present and future, integrating environmental protection with community development."

Impactful projects for a just ecological transition

The call seeks projects in the intermediate or advanced phase of development that can demonstrate significant results and the ability to scale their impact. The initiatives must focus on key areas of the just ecological transition, such as the circular economy, responsible consumption, sustainable mobility, access to renewable energies, environmental recovery, green employment training, and social innovation.

The total prize amounts to 120,000 euros, which will be distributed among a maximum of three winning projects selected by a jury of experts. In addition to financial assistance, the winners will receive specialized support through mentoring sessions to enhance the scope and consolidation of their proposals.

The deadline for applications is March 11, 2026. Individuals and small to medium-sized legal entities, whether public or private and for-profit or not-for-profit, may participate. Examples include startups, social entities, small businesses, educational institutions, NGOs, foundations, and associations. The legal terms and the registration form are available on the official website of fundación Moeve. Likewise, to clarify doubts and facilitate participation, online informative sessions will be organized on February 27 and March 3, which can be accessed by registering through the links found on the awards website.

Fundación Moeve is a general interest organization and non-profit whose objective is to carry out initiatives aimed at serving the needs and priorities of local communities. Their priority areas of action are people, biodiversity, and social innovation.
